

Douglas-fir sawlog prices are soaring on record lumber prices. Right now, the export markets cannot compete with the domestic sawmills as the prices for lumber is surging due to lack of supply. Mills will be trying to buy winter inventory so I expect prices to be good through 4th quarter. The Covid-19 slump appears to be short lived-at least for the near term.

Hemlock and Grand fir prices are improving only slightly as are the hardwood log prices. Prices for those species are heavily export dependent and the export demand is quite soft.

Cedar is in demand with prices increasing by 10% or more.

If you have Douglas-fir, now is the time to consider logging.
