

July 2017 Monthly Log Price Trends

Log prices (both export and domestic) continue to increase monthly contrary to the past patterns of summer time price declines. The mills and yards just cannot get enough volume to meet demand.

The U.S. recently put additional anti-dumping duties on Canadian lumber imports but so far, the national lumber market is not in a panic, at least not in the short term. While local prices are jumping, it may take a while to feel the real impact of the tariffs nationwide.

Cedar prices took another jump to $1700 per thousand for long logs. This is an all time high.

Alder is in short supply so prices are at a 10 year high. Hemlock prices are closing in on the $700 mark for the first time since 2014.
